Re: Ofsted Inspections Update

Dear families,

Many of you will be aware that a national review and consultation of the Ofsted framework has taken place and led to a new framework being published in November 2025. With the new inspection arrangements now fully in place, this letter provides information on the key differences between the current and previous ways of reporting an inspection.

For many years, an overall judgement grade was used as the indicator of how good a school was. This changed a few years ago with schools no longer receiving an overall grade, but grades for each of the categories that were inspected.

Whilst the underlying framework remains the same, the way of reporting has however changed substantially.

Schools will receive an online 'report card' that details the 'grades' awarded for the following areas of an inspection:

Safeguarding, Inclusion, Curriculum and Teaching, Achievement, Attendance and Behaviour, Personal Development and Wellbeing, and Leadership and Governance, with Early Years and Sixth Form Provision included where relevant.

Each of these areas receives one of five grades:

Exceptional Standard; Strong Standard; Expected Standard; Needs Attention Indicator; Urgent Improvement indicator.

Safeguarding continues to be judged separately as Met or Not Met.

There is a strengthened focus on inclusion that flows throughout all of the inspection.

As always whenever Ofsted refreshes its inspection processes, there is an increase in expectation. With a change from the former 4-point scale (outstanding/good/requires improvement/inadequate) to a 5-point scale, direct comparisons with previous inspection reports cannot reasonably be made.

As schools are inspected, we will all become more familiar with the new way of reporting, and, in the meantime, if you have any questions, please do contact myself, or the Trust's Director of Education (Julie Tridgell) or CEO (Dr Fiona Hammans).

Kind regards,

Alastair West
